ABOUT ME

I am a creative Web Developer with a background in the legal profession. My professional experience has taught me discipline and how important continuous learning is, which I feel really jives well with the tech world. The most exciting part about this change is being able to use my creativity, there is no better feeling than seeing your work come to life in the browser.

My interest in development began last year when a friend suggested I try a one day coding course at General Assembly. From the minute I saw the magic a little HTML5 and CSS created in my browser I was in awe of the power of code! I began to see code as an incredibly fun outlet for my creativity. However, I was on the path to becoming a lawyer so coding took a back seat to my continued legal studies until I realised I just wasn't as passionate about law as I was about coding! So, I enrolled in General Assembly's Web Development Immersive Course in June and have been thrilled to be learning code every day since.

I also love the diversity of talent that the tech world attracts and am looking forward to working with an innovative company that has a fantastic culture!
